HONGKONG, August 23rd 1892.

This projected visit of the Emperor KWANG SU to Tientsin will be a real letter day in the life of that eager puppet sovereign.

His Imperial Majesty, who is said to have the appearance of a mere youth, is now in the twenty-seventh year of his age and though he has nominally reigned for twenty-three years, he is still treated like a child and held in such close binding strings that he is not even allowed to travel as far as Tientsin without the protecting care (or surveillance) of the Empress Dowager. It will be recalled by some of our readers that the Emperor Tung Chi, then a lad of eighteen, got tired of the four walls of the Palace at Peking and the gloomy fates which bound him there, and so far revolted from tutelage in 1873 as to escape from the capital and visit Tientsin in disguise. He was, of course, speedily recaptured and conveyed back to his imperial prison, where he shortly afterwards died—it was given out—from small-pox contracted at Tientsin. With the sad fate of his youthful predecessor before him, the Emperor KWANG SU has never ventured to break bounds, though he has, we believe, frequently expressed a great desire to see something of the outside world, a most wholesome longing which would have been easily attainable in any other country, however begrimed or conservative. His Majesty's wishes have apparently at last been so far met that a journey to and sojourn in Tientsin by the Imperial Court has been decided upon. Much state is evidently to be observed, however, and the young monarch oppressed by the burden of the Dragon Crown will have no chance of any freedom of movement. Indeed the ceremony to be observed will hardly be less formal than that ordinarily prevailing at Peking. A new palace is to be erected by the Viceroy, as there is no building in the port suitable in His Excellency's opinion for the occupation of the Son of Heaven. This decision, which means the expenditure of sum enormous upwards of a million taels, seems to have been taken owing to the impious demands of the Empress Dowager. The poor young EMPEROR is the last person in the world to crave the pomp and pageantry which have been made inseparable from his position. He is hedged about with ceremonial so that his subjects cannot get his ear; he is entirely cut off touch with them and with the times; the master of almost uncounted millions of people, he is the veriest slave to forms and precedents. Probably there is not a single individual in his wide and well populated dominion who is less to be envied than the Emperor of China. His people may revolt or they may quit the Empire for a free soil; he is tied by unbreakable bonds to the narrow limits of his court and bower, where, if he has any spirit left to him, he must be weary unto death of the atmosphere of intrigue in which he has to exist. Perhaps the best thing that could happen to him would be a split up of his Empire; in the rains he might possibly find freedom and the means of really living and reigning over some fragment of remaining territory. The only other chance of release for him from his present bondage is the appearance of some official strong enough to promote and carry out a revolution in the system of government. But the chances of that seem remote indeed in China, where the sole ambition is to be the piling up of money.

The K. P. steamer Greek, with mails, &c., left Shanghai for the port yesterday at noon.

There were 1,216 visitors to the City Hall Museum last week, of whom 170 were Europeans.

The German transport Crefeld, 2,414 tons burthen, arrived at Singapore on the 15th August from Bremen, bound for China, which she is taking 19 officers and 467 soldiers.

A curious slip was made at the meeting of the Dutch Council yesterday by the Chairman, who, instead of the capital "one hundred and ten," when what he evidently meant was increasing it by one hundred per cent, or in other words, doubling it.

The Danish steamer Aets arrived at Shanghai on the 18th August from Hankow, having been in collision on the night of the 12th with a steamer of the Chinese King fleet. No slight damage was done to the Aets, but the starboard side of the Aets was considerably damaged, several plates being bulged; one of the life-boats was smashed in the davits and the gangway was carried away. —N. C. Daily News.

The steamer Juan arrived at Singapore late on the 13th August from Willemstad, having a cargo of rice, sugar, &c., for the German navy. She will call at Tientsin, will connect with the United States army arrival. The United States cannot betray the insurgents after their recent glorious achievements in war with Spain. Yunnan, going to Tientsin, will bring a division of the army to the insurgents and aid them in establishing a good and liberal government with such control only on the part of the United States as may be necessary to make that government permanent and effective.

"It would be a cruel breach of faith to force the islands back under the detested rule of Spanish cruelty or to give up the Yunnan to the slaves of a foreign power." Dowey erected the flag of liberty and the insurgents have rallied round that flag with a force and determination which only those who fight for liberty can exhibit. That flag will remain where heroism and patriotism plant it as the emblem of liberty and good government in the Orient where cruelty and despotism have so long reigned.

"What has been done in the Philippines could have been done and possibly may yet be done in Cuba. If Gomez had been crushed and encouraged by the administration as Arzobaldo was, he would have been crushed by Dowey.

Spanish rule in the slaves of a foreign power.

"The Colombia Grecia, displaying the 'virgin flag' of democratic activity opened up to German trade by the recognition of McKinley, insists that its importance to Germany is of a commercial and not of a military nature. The harbour must be a free harbour; there must be no one-sided government on the part of the military authorities to the detriment of industrial development. Above all, it must be born in mind that military strength is in all things essentially a commanding city."

The Singapore Free Press of the 15th August says—A serious accident occurred to Mr. H. B. Pike of the Hongkong Bank last evening. He was riding along the sea-front, near Russel Hotel, when his horse, a big chestnut, got restive and suddenly bolted. Mr. Pike lost his stirrup, and was badly thrown, just opposite the hotel. After a stay of a couple of hours a start was made for home. The reader will note that the six months and thirteen days of the Aets was considerably increased, several plates being bulged; one of the life-boats was smashed in the davits and the gangway was carried away. —*N. He was riding along the sea-front, near Russel Hotel, when his horse, a big chestnut, got restive and suddenly bolted. Mr. Pike lost his stirrup, and was badly thrown, just opposite the hotel. After a stay of a couple of hours a start was made for home. The reader will note that the six months and thirteen days of the Aets was considerably increased, several plates being bulged; one of the life-boats was smashed in the davits and the gangway was carried away. —N. C. Daily News.

The Singapore Free Press of the 15th August says—A serious accident occurred to Mr. H. B. Pike of the Hongkong Bank last evening. He was riding along the sea-front, near Russel Hotel, when his horse, a big chestnut, got restive and suddenly bolted. Mr. Pike lost his stirrup

Criticising the scheme before the Committee, he said: "The Government scheme there out is but one opinion, viz., not only that it is most involved, but by its provisions for withdrawing rupees from circulation it is not only that it will bring about a financial crisis, but it will be viewed with favour by the Committee. The idea of sending down rupees in order to further contract our currency is universally condemned; recent experience proves that they are far from being redundant; indeed, if we had a few more crores of rupees in active circulation we should have been better able to move our enormous exports and imports, and have had more room to manoeuvre in the market, as such appreciated security in the open market as to send to us much as 18 per cent. being paid on the security of gold, and 24 per cent. on silver. As for Government paper which was nominally quoted at 93, money could not be had on it at any rate. Such was the crisis through which we passed, and in a moment of stress the steamer Castries, of 1,700 tons, had to be sent to Hongkong, actually owing to a want of money on their own securities, although their owners were full to overflowing. They told applicants to go and buy Council Bills which were selling freely. It was all very well for exchange banks to get out Council Bills, but how can native traders and bankers raise money on the Government paper which they hold by so little? I am inclined to that suggestion, and investing their proceeds in Council Bills. Whilst this operation was being carried through, the pressure might be so great that in all probability they would in the interval be compelled to suspend payment. Unfortunately they had several cases during the past year of individual natives failing on account of their inability to obtain money on their own securities, they passed on. The implicit confidence hitherto reposed by the Natives of India in the convertibility of Government paper into cash at a moment's notice has been considerably shaken, and Government will find this out to their cost when doing business in the future."

As for Mr. Lindsay's speech, I think there is a right to demand it to the acceptance of the authorities and the general public with such modifications as may suggest themselves to the Committee. In order to secure a stable currency Government must make up their minds to incur a certain amount of risk, and can well afford to do this considering the gains they make by their sales of Council Bills at 93. It is 93, whilst the metallic value of the rupee is only 100.

TENNISON'S "REVENGE."

Florence Lucy Bernal, New York Herald, writing from England to the New York Herald, says: "We may suggest in your columns that the poor old Castries, the steamer to burn in all the United States public schools? So glorious and perfect an old world would greatly help at this moment to increase the fervour of patriotism and to help cement the love of the two countries, England and America. If this great power from the blood of our boys and girls here, what feelings must its stirring measure awaken in the hearts of young Americans today. A single very fine old ship could well drift with it to youth again in the United States. We were one in those brave days of old, we are now no more."

He sailed away from Flores till the Spaniard came in sight.

With his huge sea castles leaping upon the weather bow?

Shall we fight, or shall we fly?

Good Sir Richard tell us now!

And, Sir Richard said again, "We be all good Englishmen."

Let us hope these dogs of Seville, the children of the devil.

For a never turned my back upon a devil yet!"

And the stately Spanish men to their flagship bore him then.

Where they laid him by the mast, old Sir Richard caught at last!

And they praised him to his face with their curtly forced grace,

But he rose upon their deck and he died —

"I have fought for Queen and Fatti, like a true born man and true;

I have only done my duty as a man is bound to do;

With a joyful spirit, Sir Richard Grenville died;

And he fell upon their decks and he died.

LIFE IN MANILA.

IMPRESSIONS OF A RESIDENT.

The following appears in the Paris paper Le Patrie.

Living is not dear in Manila, as a cook for a month and sum of two francs a day is ready to provide food for a family of four persons. For an additional 25 centimes, he will also undertake to decorate the table with flowers. This is what an old resident of Manila has to say of his cook's work. "The man's wages were 23 francs a month, from which he had to pay a manorial tax of 10 per cent. Notwithstanding this reduction, his wife and two children still had to support two children, possibly keeping a nightingale. The natives of the Philippines have a passion for gambling, and however hard up find means to save sufficient money to extend in bets on cock fights and dog contests."

I was never able to discover what my cook made by petty peculation at my expense, but he was continually making a request for an advance of 10 francs. He always accounted to me for his expenses, and when I asked him why he was so little, he said, "It is to pay for the funeral of a relative." At first I was touched by his pious solicitude for his belongings, but it was not long before he abused my good nature, and had the audacity to ask for means for the interment of his mother, although I distinctly remembered having met a similar demand a month previously from the cook of another house. He was always asking me to become acquainted with his god-relatives in order that I might not have to meet on several occasions, the necessary outlay for the interment of the same individual."

A VILLAGE OF 300,000 INHABITANTS.

But let us return to the living, and in particular to Manila, a capital which a facsimile chronicler calls "a village of 300,000 inhabitants." To Americans accustomed to houses of from 20 to 30 rooms, it is hard to conceive the proportion to the importance and the size of the town; it is a sort of surprise to find in one of the largest commercial centres of the Far East only miserable wooden shanties. The houses in Manila are very low, and have no glass windows. Plastered on the walls is absolutely forbidden, and they are simply covered with some light material. No single gas-pipe is to be found in the buildings.

SOURCE: GARDNER.

Incredulous fate condemns the architects of the capital of the Philippines to erect only temporary structures. In this town, so often the scene of frightful catastrophes, a man who goes out in the morning to look after his affairs is never certain when he returns home to find his house still standing. Earthquakes are frequent, and though the natives are accustomed to quickly cover a whole neighbourhood into ruins. But the inhabitants of Manila have another excuse, which is always present, rats of enormous size, which find in the inexhaustible supplies of rice, produced on one of the most fertile spots on the globe, an abundant source of food.

It is true that farsighted nature has supplied us with a remedy, the rat, and that large snakes, belonging to him life, and that we have into the interiors of the dwellings in order to enjoy the pleasures of rat-hunting, and thereby render valuable services. Unfortunately, these nimrods do not hunt for the love of the sport. As soon as their stomachs can contain no more, they fall into a profound sleep of lethargy, which is prolonged until digestion is completed. Then the rats, having had time to renew their course of nocturnal distillation. Thus takes the greatest pleasure in carrying off, with as much noise as possible, the foot-gear of the inmates from one extremity of the house to the other without being interfered with by the cats, which are in great numbers in Manila, but are extremely stupid. These disagreeables are constantly annoying at a time when the inhabitants are in a state of siege.
